To Whom It May Concern:

I have known the Bower family for many years and it was a highlight for me to play on a Stanley Cup team with Cindy's father in 1967.

Over the years, I have watched Cindy grow up and it became obvious to all that she inherited her Dad's drive to excel as she started her power skating schools.

For over (30) years she has honed her power skating techniques while coaching in Canada, the United States and Europe and with hard work she broke ground when she became one of the first female coaches to work with NHL players and teams.

Bruce Boudreau, a former teammate of mine, and Bill Barber, a former opponent and an Honoured Member of the Hockey Hall of Fame have both used the services of Cindy Bower with their professional teams and were extremely pleased with how their players improved their skating skills.

She has the unique ability to evaluate the skating ability of players to determine what needs to be done to improve speed, power and mobility. This is accomplished with proven skating drills and programs.

If Cindy takes a player on as a client she will dedicate herself to the success of the player's improved performance. Throughout the whole process, she will conduct herself as a true professional and become an important component of not only a player's improvement but also the team's success.

Sincerely,
Ron Ellis
